CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE BULLETIN

30 October 1963

DAILY BRIEF

South Vietnam: (Extensive reshuffling of the South Vietnamese military command, and possibly of the civilian cabinet, is reported to be imminent.)

(The changes reportedly will affect the top post of the armed forces and may involve appointment of one or more generals to the cabinet. Contemplated changes are also said to include a shift of corps commanders and possibly some province chiefs. A redesignation of military corps boundaries, to become effective on 1 November, could provide the occasion for some of the shifts.)

*Dahomey: The threat of serious civil disorder has lessened following the trade unionists' reluctant acceptance of ex-president Maga's participation in the four-man provisional government headed by Army Chief of Staff Soglo.

The labor leaders have suspended the general strike which forced Maga's resignation from the presidency. Despite their unhappiness at Maga's retaining a role in the government, they appear to be mollified by Soglo's assumption of the top position.

The new government will probably not deviate in any significant way from the predominantly pro-Western orientation of the Maga regime. Soglo, a veteran of many years service in the French Army, is reputed to be a conservative. Justin Ahomadegbe, whose tribal connection with Soglo suggests he may emerge as the most influential of the three civilian members of the government, in the past has supported Dahomey's ties with France.

The more militant labor leaders may yet demand Maga's complete ouster. If he is dropped, a strong reaction can probably be expected from northern tribesmen, who support the ex-president.

The upheaval in Dahomey will probably hasten the demise of the moderate, Paris-oriented Afro-Malagasy Union (UAM). It is likely to compound the confusion and hesitancy among UAM members which resulted from the revolution in Congo (Brazzaville) last August. It may also stimulate labor leaders in other UAM states to seek greater political influence.

There are at present no indications that any other African states plan to intervene militarily in Dahomey.

DAILY BRIEF

4

Dominican Republic: (Organized protests against the provisional government are increasing, but the attitude of the general public still has not crystallized.)

(On 27 October, Bosch's Dominican Revolutionary Party attracted several thousand persons to an anti-government rally, its first since the coup. Agitation by leftist students, which resulted in one death and caused the closing of Santo Domingo's public schools on 29 October, has not abated. These developments lend credence to the US Embassy's feeling that "an undercurrent of uneasiness" is developing over the continuing political impasse.)

(A break in the new regime's international isolation is imminent. The United Kingdom intends to recognize it today and other West European powers probably will follow suit shortly.)

NOTES

Israel-Syria: The start of fall plowing by the Israelis in sensitive areas of the demilitarized zone has increased prospects of trouble with Syria. The UN Truce Supervision Organization has yet to get the two governments to agree on the precise location of a de facto line separating areas of previous Jewish and Arab cultivation.
